Five Factors that make your UPS fail early.

Placement: Your UPS needs space to breathe, so don't block its fans and "lungs." You wouldn't want to be stuffed under a desk or buried in a rack closet, nor does your UPS.

Environment: Like placement, your UPS likes to live in the same climate as you. A hot and humid room might be nice for an occasional spa, but not for your power protection friend.

Sensitivity: Every time the UPS goes to battery it reduces the life of the battery a bit. Most UPSes have a sensitivity, that allows you to adjust how significant the disruption should be before it goes to battery.

Full Discharge: Even worse than minor disruptions, are the full drains of the batteries. If it saves your work, then its worth it, but turn off the UPS for scheduled outages and unnecessary tests.

Maintenance: While your UPS is not a house plant, it still needs semi-regular care. Get in the habit of blowing out the fans and checking the temperature of the UPS twice a year. Or call us.

Please Install a Surge Suppressor!

Recently, we have lost a lot of UPSes to transient surge events. Many people still believe a UPS is a surge suppressor... But its not! Buy a panel mount surge suppressor from your electrician or ask us about our systems starting at $99.

UPS-As-A-Service

Are your tired of maintaining little UPSes throughout your facility? Ask us about our new UPS-as-a-Service program where you get UPSes installed & maintained for a low monthly rate.
